

IRISH AMERICAN PARTNERSHIP

In September 2024, the Irish American Partnership led a three-day Leadership Mission to Ireland, where it distributed $600,000 in grants, bringing its year-to-date funding for Ireland to $2.5 million. The funds aided programs in counties Galway and Mayo, including primary schools, universities, and community organizations.

Irish-American Partnership Executive Director Mary Sugrue said the trip, which engaged with leaders in academia, business, sports and the arts, “allowed us to evaluate our funding and gave us a vital understanding of the great impact giving has on youth and communities across Ireland. We had the chance to meet the young people benefiting directly from Partnership investment, gaining insight into the grassroots efficacy of our work.”

The funded programs were selected for their transformative impact on young people and communities and included the Activating Social Empathy initiative at the University of Galway, access scholarships at Atlantic Technological University Mayo campus in Castlebar and the Mary Robinson Centre in Ballina.

The awards were announced at a reception in Ireland that included United States Ambassador to Ireland, Claire D. Cronin.

“The Irish American Partnership is an organization that has become very near and dear to my heart since I became U.S. Ambassador to Ireland,” said Ambassador Cronin. “This organization's impact is felt where it is needed.”
